Mrs. Norman Ogden Whitehouse

NEWPORT for the brilliant summer season . . . a whirl of early autumn festivities in New York, then on to Melton Mowbray, England, for the fox-hunting . . . winter in Italy or Egypt . . . spring in Paris . . . such is the gay round of this charming cosmopolitan, the much sought after Mrs. Norman Ogden Whitehouse.

To the education of a princess Mrs. Whitehouse owes subtle secrets of charm and chic. Before her marriage she was the Princess Tamara Bragation Moukrabinsky, of an ancient and illustrious family of Georgia, in Russia. The distinction of her taste is much admired. Petite and piquante, she is dark and very lovely, always perfectly dressed and exquisitely groomed.

AT the Newport Casino or as the gracious hostess of the Whitehouse villa, "Eastbourne Lodge," Mrs. Whitehouse prefers the elegance of all-white or all-black costumes. At Bailey's Beach she wears the simplest sort of sports frocks of beige or peach or jade.

Belonging to the first class of spenders of Chicago's heritage are the family of Whitehouses, some of whom have fine mansions at Newport, R. I., and others whose names are familiar in reports from Europe's fashionable resorts and gay life. Fifty years and more ago the founders of this now numerous stock were among the conspicuous builders of Chicago. They first belonged to that west side colony that included the Carter H. Harrisons, the Samuel J. Walkers, the B. F. and H. H. Honorés, and many others.

Bishop Whitehouse was the immediate ancestor of this branch of the Whitehouse clan and used to officiate at the Episcopal cathedral on West Washington street. His high stepped, white stone house being only a block or two away from the church, he used to march slowly in full canonicals from his front door to that of the cathedral, with a choir boy in front carrying the bible or prayerbook on a cushion.

Two of his four sons, William Fitzhugh and Francis Meredith Whitehouse, married and moved to north side residences. Eventually both left Chicago for the more splendid society of eastern cities. Now their progeny is scattered over Newport, Boston's north shore, and Europe's fashionable resorts, but all the time the money that enables them to take prominent places wherever they may be pours out of Chicago, the generous mother city that gives all and gets nothing in return.
